HEADED TO THE BAY

After a weekend sweep against the Green Bay Gamblers last weekend, the Sioux Falls Stampede now look to head down I-29 to take on the Sioux City Musketeers on Friday night for the third time this season.

With a 5-2 win in Sioux City on October 2, followed by a 5-3 loss in the Stampede home opener on October 3, the Herd are looking to prove that the loss to the Musketeers was a one-off occurrence this season. The Musketeers currently sport a 4-9-1-0 record and sit seventh in the USHL's Western Conference, while the Stampede are fourth in the West, with a 9-7-0-0 record.

The Sioux City power play has been a strong point for their team so far, with a 20.5% success rate, while for Sioux Falls, the power play has been struggling to find consistency all year. With a league-leading 83 opportunities on the power play, the Stampede have converted just 13 times, with a 15.7% success rate on the man advantage.
On the other side of the special teams game, the Stampede sit fourth in the league on the penalty kill, with a success rate of 86.2%, having allowed eight goals while shorthanded. Sioux City's penalty kill trails by a decent margin, sitting in the middle of the pack, with a 79.2% success rate on the PK, but scoring three shorthanded goals along the way. The Stampede have picked up two goals while shorthanded this season.

WORKING ONS AND WINS

Right now, Stampede head coach Ryan Cruthers has said he is looking to have his team find chemistry and consistent lines moving forward.

After hitting a stride for a few games, the Sioux Falls power play is going to have figure out something that works again, and what better weekend to do that than while on the road for a pair?

Tampa Bay Lightning prospect Cooper Soller has been held off the scoresheet for back-to-back games just twice this season, but he needs to find his way back on the board if he wants to prevent a third-consecutive game without scoring.

SIOUX FALLS PLAYERS TO WATCH

Forward Max Davis went on a bit of a heater in his home state last weekend against Green Bay, but now the question is can he keep it going? He has eight points in his last six games, including five in the two games against the Gamblers.

Tender signing Dylan Delgado (2028) appeared in his first two games back from injury in the games against Green Bay, and he will be one to watch as he settles into his game and the USHL.

On the blue line, defenseman Markus Jakobsen has been a steady presence for the Stampede through 16 games, earning a spot on the top pair with Wade Weil as Anthony Bongo has been out. With four points so far this season, it could be a big weekend for Jakobsen, starting on Friday.

SIOUX CITY PLAYERS TO WATCH

Daniil Butin leads all Musketeers in points and goals, with 15 points (8G, 7A) through 14 games this season.

After winning the Clark Cup with the Stampede last season, Jake Merens is having a bit of a breakout year with Sioux City, accruing 11 points (6G, 5A) in 12 games to start the year.

Making plays from the back end, Mason Stenger has nine assists through 13 games played for the Musketeers this season, and the second-year defenseman is going to be a big part of giving his team a chance to win on Friday night.
