Ivy League Championships

1986 • 20-7, 9-3 Ivy League

The Crimson sported a 9-3 conference record to earn Harvard's first ever Ivy League title in basketball. Harvard beat Dartmouth, 75-66, in the final game of the season to share the title with the Big Green.

1988 • 21-5, 12-2 Ivy League

A 71-60 victory over Brown gives Harvard a 12-1 Ivy record, and despite a season-ending loss to Dartmouth, the Crimson shared the Ancient Eight crown with the Big Green. It was the team's second Ivy League title in three seasons, as head coach Kathy Delaney-Smith led her team to a 21-5 record. It was also the second time in three years the Crimson recorded 20 or more wins.

1991 • 16-10, 12-2 Ivy League

Harvard defeated Brown, 76-65, to extend its winning streak to eight games and guarantee itself its third Ivy League title. Harvard dropped its next game at Princeton, snapping the Harvard streak one short of the school record for consecutive victories. The Crimson finished with a 17-9 record overall.

1996 • 20-7, 13-1 Ivy League

Harvard finished the regular season with a 20-6 overall record and take the Ivy title with a 13-1 record. Delaney-Smith guided the Crimson in its first appearance in the NCAA tournament.

1997 • 20-7, 14-0 Ivy League

The Crimson defeated Dartmouth in the regular-season finale to make Ivy League history, completing the first "perfect" season in league play. Since the institution of double round-robin play in 1983, no other team had posted an unblemished Ancient Eight season. Harvard took on North Carolina in the first round of NCAA's, losing 78-53.

1998 • 23-5, 12-2 Ivy League

The Crimson defeated Brown, 93-76, to clinch its third consecutive outright Ivy League title. Harvard set a school wins record with a 22-4 overall record and made its third consecutive trip to the NCAAs where the Crimson made history by upsetting No. 1 seed Stanford.

2002 • 22-6, 13-1 Ivy League

After a four-point loss to Princeton in the second game of the season, the Crimson won 12 straight to win the Ancient Eight title and make its fourth trip to the NCAA Tournament. Harvard won 22 games, just one shy of the program record.

2003 • 22-5, 14-0 Ivy League

Harvard completed its second perfect Ivy League season and its fifth 20 win season. The Crimson captured its second straight Ivy League title and eighth overall. Harvard fell to host Kansas State, 79-69, in the first round of the NCAA Tournament.

2005 • 20-8, 12-2 Ivy League

Harvard went 20-8 overall and 12-2 in Ivy League play to share the Ivy League title with Dartmouth. The Crimson fell in a playoff game with the Big Green to determine the NCAA bid.

2007 • 15-13, 13-1 Ivy League

Harvard turned a four-point halftime advantage into a 64-48 win over Cornell to claim its 10th Ancient Eight title and the Ivy League's automatic berth to the NCAA tournament. The Crimson won 12 straight league games to capture the title.

2008 • 18-11, 11-3 Ivy League

Harvard defeated Brown in the second to last game of the season to earn a share of the Ivy League title with Cornell and Dartmouth. It was the 400th win for head coach Kathy Delaney-Smith. Harvard finished with a 18-11 overall mark and an 11-3 league record. The Crimson fell to Dartmouth in a playoff game.

Ivy League Tournament Championships

2025 • 24-5, 11-3 Ivy League
Entering the tournament as the three-seed, Harvard went on to win its first ever Ivy League Tournament with two historic wins over [2] Princeton and [1] Columbia. First, the Crimson overcame a 13-point second half deficit to defeat the defending champions, Princeton Tigers, 70-67. The following day, Harvard handled the Columbia Lions, 74-71, knocking off the top seed to win its first ever conference tournament crown. The Crimson own the only three upsets by seed in the tournaments history with its two wins in 2025 and its win over Columbia in the semifinals in 2023.

NCAA Tournament Appearances

NCAA Tournament

There has always been an obvious incentive to win an Ivy League championship, but it took on even greater meaning in the 1993-94 season. With the increase of the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship field from 48 to 64 teams, the Ivy League and eight other conferences received an automatic berth for the first time since its inception.

Harvard has represented the Ivy League in the NCAA tournament six times, making its latest appearance in 2007. The Crimson has had the opportunity to play some of the top teams in the country in Kansas State (2003), Vanderbilt (1996), North Carolina (1997 and 2002) and Maryland (2007), and made NCAA tournament history in 1998 by being the first (and only) team — men's or women's — to receive a No. 16 seed in the tournament and knock off a No. 1 seed. That season, the Crimson shocked Stanford, 71-67, before falling to Arkansas, 82-64, in the second round.

"The value of going to the NCAA tournament is enormous," said head coach Kathy Delaney-Smith. "The experience that our athletes have gained will help them respond to the daily challenges of being one of the teams to beat in the Ivy League. The NCAA tournament is a tremendous teaching tool. The success that brought us to that level gave our kids the confidence to believe in themselves, and the knowledge that they can compete with any team in the country."

It was an NCAA tournament first. Not since the inception of the 64-team field for the women (1993-94) or the men (1984-85) had it been done. Not in 71 previous tries — or in 88 tries since — had a No. 16 seed knocked off a No. 1 seed in NCAA tournament play. But on March 14, 1998, in front of a crowd of 5,138 screaming fans, Harvard accomplished what seemed the impossible. The Crimson, in only its third NCAA tournament appearance, played the part of the ungracious guest in Stanford's Maples Pavilion. Some attributed it to Stanford's loss of two key players to injury days prior to the game. Some said it was due to Stanford mistakes and miscues. Some recognized the talent and resolve of the Harvard contingent, led by All-American Allison Feaster '98, that brought everything they had to the floor that night and made tournament history with a 71-67 win.

On April 4, 2006, ESPN chronicled the top moments in NCAA Women's Basketball Championship history. The Crimson's historic upset of No. 1-seed Stanford was chosen as the No. 6 moment.

WNIT Appearances

Women's National Invitation Tournament (WNIT)

Harvard has made ten appearances in the WNIT, most among Ivy League schools, and on March 15, 2012 the Crimson earned the first WNIT win in Ancient Eight history with its 73-71 victory at Hofstra. Harvard followed that victory up a year later with a 61-57 win at Hartford in the first round of the 2013 tournament. The Crimson became the first team in conference history to earn an at-large berth to a postseason tournament with an invitation to the WNIT in 2013-14. Harvard showed it belonged, beating Iona, 90-89, at the buzzer.

Harvard's 90 points scored against the Gaels marks the highest scoring output for an Ivy League team in WNIT history. Brogan Berry and Temi Fagbenle each own the conference's individual WNIT scoring mark with 26 points, while Emma Golen matched the Ancient Eight rebounding record with 10 and Fagbenle broke the conference's highest field goal percentage with her 13-of-18 performance (72.2) against the Gaels. The Crimson also set Ivy League records with 42 rebounds and a shooting percentage of 50.6 percent

In the 2023 WNIT, Harvard went further than it ever had before, making it to the fourth round of the tournament. They started at home with a huge win over Towson, 103-63, a game in which Harmoni Turner posted the sixth triple double in WNIT history and second ever at Harvard. Harvard went on to win on the road 89-87 at UMass and score another win at home against URI, 74-63. The Crimson fell to Columbia to end the tournament run in the WNIT Great 8, 77-71.

WBIT Appearances

Women’s Basketball Invitation Tournament (WBIT)
The WBIT was established in the 2023-24 season and Harvard has made one appearance in the tournament. Harvard got its first ever win in the WBIT on March 19, 2026 when it beat Navy, 73-52. The Crimson ended up advancing to the Quarterfinals in 2025-26 after defeating Eastern Kentucky, 63-34, in the second round. Harvard’s run was cut short when it fell to [3] Wisconsin in an overtime heartbreaker.
