In NAIA Football, ARC stands for Area Rating Committee (and its resulting ARC Ratings). An ARC is a regional committee used to evaluate teams and help determine the 20-team field for the NAIA Football Championship Series (FCS)

Key Facts About ARCs

- Geographic Regions: The NAIA divides its football-playing conferences into four regional areas:
  - West ARC: Frontier Conference, Sooner Athletic Conference
  - North ARC: Great Plains Athletic Conference, Mid-States Football Association
  - East ARC: Mid-Southern Conference, The Sun Conference, Appalachian Athletic Conference, and Independent institutions
  - Midwest ARC: Heart of America Athletic Conference, Kansas Collegiate Athletic Conference
- Committee Composition: Each ARC includes a coach representative from each conference within that area, plus an appointed committee chair who also sits on the national board. Independents are included in the East ARC but do not have a direct vote.
- Regional Rankings: Each committee ranks the teams in its area (typically 1 through 8). The final ARC ratings create the eligible pool of teams from which at-large bids to the NAIA playoffs are selected by the National Selection Committee.

The NAIA Football Performance Index (FPI) — also referred to as the Football Performance Indicator — is a mathematical, points-based ranking system introduced by the NAIA in 2025 to help evaluate teams and select at-large qualifiers for the NAIA Football Championship Series.

How It Works

• Points System: The FPI awards points to teams for every game against an NAIA opponent based on wins and losses, whether the game was played at home or on the road, and the opponent's winning percentage.
• Calculation: All earned points from NAIA games are added together and divided by the total number of NAIA games played to yield a team's average FPI score.
• Exclusions: Games against non-NAIA opponents (such as NCAA Division II, Division III, or FCS programs) are not included in the FPI calculation. (Results against non-NAIA teams can still be evaluated in other secondary selection criteria).
• Dynamic Adjustments: Because a team's FPI score relies on opponents' final regular-season records rather than their record at the time the game was played, an FPI score can rise or fall even on a week a team does not play.
